204 Shah Jahan's Token, Gold, 10.81 g, Mohur, Patandeo mint, Square-area type with the mint name in the left margin on rev; Kalima within dotted and square borders on obv. Very Fine+, Rare. Patandeo has been a mint of Shah Jahan's silver coins but his gold coins of this mint are exceedingly rare. Most of the gold coins reported are basically contemporary copies and were intended as tokens to be circulated in that region of Gujarat. Another version of these coins seems to be that because gold coins of Patandeva were introduced, although for a shorter period of time, the demand for those gold coins became very high in the local market. This ultimately resulted into such local imitations of the Patandeo Mohurs that circulated in the local markets of Saurashtra. In any case, these coins/tokens are rare.

205 Shah Jahan, Gold, 10.92 g, Daulatabad mint, Quatrefoil type on both sides, mint name in the lower-right corner on rev, AH 1062, RY 25, date not listed in Krause catalogue (KM# 258.2). About UNC, Extremely Rare.

Gold coins of Katak of Shah Jahan are known only for a single year of issue and it seems that these were more of ceremonial than a regular currency and hence one can judge the rarity of these coins (KM# 260.22). The coin has appeared for the very first time in any Indian auction. About Extremely Fine, Great Rarity.

Estimate: ₹ 3,50,000-4,50,000

213 Shah Jahan, Silver, Rupee, Surat mint, square-area type, complete mint name in the left margin on rev, RY 18. About Extremely Fine.

Estimate: ₹ 800-1,500

Usually the Emperor would throw such coins from his seat on an elephant and these coins were meant to be small so that when a coin lands on someone's head it should not harm him and he will be pleased to receive a silver coin, considered to be a valuable coin in those days.

Although by looking at the crude execution of the coin, one tends to term it as a Token than a regular gold Mohur, however, it is quite possible that this so-called Token might turn out to be an official coin of a local chief around Surat in southern Gujarat who minted it imitating the coins of the East India Company.
